In 1913 the Creed of Starr Commonwealth was born. Today we continue to take to heart what Floyd Starr so compassionately penned that day as his core belief and the foundation of our organization, “there is no such thing as a bad boy.”*

This core value is represented in our mission, vision and core values. The values we seek to nurture and live by are honesty, compassion, respect, responsibility and fairness.

It is these core values that guide us and allow us to continue to build upon Starr’s strength-based treatment philosophy and provide hope for today’s children and families.

*Starr Commonwealth changed the statement to read, there is no such thing as a bad child, to reflect the care of girls as well as boys.

We believe there is no such thing as a bad child.

We believe everyone has the responsibility to help and no one has the right to hurt, physically or verbally.

We believe people can change and problems are solvable opportunities that facilitate growth and development.

We believe in recognizing and developing the strengths of all children and families.

We believe in the oneness of humankind and will embrace all people as social equals, valuing their diversity.

We believe all children deserve positive relationships.

We believe in the principles of servant leadership and are obligated to help one another reach full potential.

We believe all people can be contributing community members with a commitment to social interest and volunteerism.

We believe all people are spiritual beings and, in order to reach their full potential, children and families must be given opportunities for spiritual growth.

Vision:

Be a national leader in strength-based practices for children and youth.

Mission:

Create positive environments where children can flourish.
